Grading:*Mostly As

You are intentional with your parenting. You are a student of the culture. You have a good eye on what your kids do and how much of the culture is effecting them. You even tend to err on the side of caution when allowing your child to experience things that the culture can use to influence them. This causes you to say no more often and possibly even causes rifts or fights with your children. Especially if they are teenagers. Don't give up. They will thank you some day for holding fast to your desire to see them walk on the path to abundant life.

Mostly Bs

You know what happens in your household but you tend to give in more often. Whether it's because you've never heard about the influence the culture is trying to have over your child or any number of other reasons you tend to give in when your child wants something. Your child thinks you're pretty cool because you say yes so much. They tend to fit in with most other kids and are rarely without the latest trend or newest item. You may consider having a conversation with your child(ren) about what the culture's scheme or plan is and decide with them to live a bit more intentionally.

Mostly Cs

Your child is either too young for most of this survey to apply to you or you're mostly unaware of what your child does. If you're the former stop reading. If you're the latter, please continue:

There is no possible way you have a gauge on the influence the culture is having on your child. This ministry exists FOR YOU. Ask God what He would have you be as a parent and prepare yourself to think intentionally about your parenting methods. The only thing worse than your child being involved with dangerous activity is you as the parent having no idea if or when it's happening. Be prepared to take a stand. Prepare for some battles, especially if your child is a teenager, as you begin to turn this ship around towards the path to an abundant life for your child.
